Program Overview:

What is a Crucial Conversation?

A crucial conversation is a discussion between two or more people where stakes are high, opinions vary, and emotions run strong. These conversations—when handled poorly or ignored—cause teams and organizations to get less-than-desirable results.

Crucial Conversations Training

Drawing on 30 years of research, this award-winning training teaches you how to achieve spirited dialogue at all levels in your organization; you'll begin to surface the best ideas, make the highest-quality decisions, and then act on your decisions with unity and commitment. This training experience introduces a set of tools that builds alignment, agreement, and interpersonal communication.

Tools for Talking When Stakes are High - Discover how Crucial Conversations Training will drive change for good throughout your organization, enabling you to:

- Resolve disagreements—accurately address concerns by talking respectfully, candidly and skillfully with someone in a safe way.
- Build acceptance rather than resistance—give and receive feedback in a way that enhances relationships and improves results.
- Speak persuasively, not abrasively—effectively talk about high-stake, emotional and controversial topics.
- Foster teamwork—get the right people involved in a way that ensures better decision-making and guarantees commitment and conviction.

Who Needs Crucial Conversations Training?

Emotional Intelligence 101

Program Overview:

MACNY is partnering with Productivity Leadership Systems (PLS) to provide Emotional Intelligence 101 training. Your organization has the unique opportunity to have access to training that is recognized internationally, and you will save significantly due to our ability to provide this training regionally.

Daniel Goleman, a leader in Emotional Intelligence research and author of Emotional Intelligence and other well-known books, defines Emotional Intelligence as “recognizing our own feelings and those of others, motivating ourselves, managing emotions well in ourselves and in our relationships.”

Emotional Intelligence is synergistic with IQ. Top performers have both. Research shows that your best chances of successfully managing your current opportunities and challenges are by maximizing your ability to effectively utilize these leadership characteristics: self-awareness and accurate self-assessment, initiative, sound-decision-making, empathy, communication, influence, adaptability and self-management – all of which are not technical management skills, but emotional intelligence management competencies.

Topics Covered / Expected Outcomes:

At this level, leaders obtain an overall understanding of:

- The link between emotional intelligence and leadership effectiveness
- The emotional intelligence leadership competency framework
- How emotions can influence thoughts, behavior, goals, decision-making and work / personal relationships
- Experience select leadership practices to enhance emotional intelligence
- How the Emotional and Social Competency Inventory (ESCI) 360° Feedback Assessment, when delivered and debriefed by a Certified Professional, can kick start a leadership transformation in emotional intelligence

Who should attend:

- Leaders who want to apply emotional intelligence to enhance their ability to form trusting relationships and create a productive workplace
- Individuals with no positional power who want to improve their influencing abilities
- Emergent leaders who want to accelerate their personal and professional growth

Testimonials:

“Emotional Intelligence is a very insightful class. Helps you think about others and yourself. Everyone can learn EI and improve themselves throughout their life.” Lisa M. Lewis, Dresser-Rand

Training Within Industry

The Link to Lean Manufacturing and Kaizen

- Do you know what it takes to transfer Lean Manufacturing training into improvements on the shop floor?
- Do your supervisors spend most of their time problem solving and expediting as opposed to improving the process and reducing cycle times?
- Would you like to decrease the time needed to train new hires while improving the quality of products produced during training?

TWI uses a common sense, learn-by-doing approach that teaches the essential skills needed by all people to manage the work of others, regardless of the industry: Skill in Instruction, Skill in Improving Method, and Skill in Leading.

The three programs are structured in the same way and are delivered in five, 2-hour daily sessions in the same week to a class of eight to ten participants. The trainer presents a real-world problem in each first session that everyone can relate to showing the poor ways such problems are typically handled in the workplace. The TWI 4-Step Method is then introduced to show the proper way to gain more effective results.

Participants spend the next four sessions practicing how to apply the TWI methodology. Each person brings in a current day job or problem from their workplace and uses the 4-step approach to solve their problem with the support of the class. With research showing that students can learn no more than seven things at a time, TWI's 4-step process maximizes learning and provides benefits to the bottom line quickly.

Training Within Industry: Job Instruction

Program Overview:

Skill in Instructing - In the first session of Job Instruction, the trainer presents an example that everyone can easily relate to and shows the problems with instructing by telling alone and again by showing alone. The TWI "4-Step Method," is introduced to show how supervisors can use a sure and reliable method to instruct that will gain better results. The second session focuses on how to prepare to train, by highlighting the job breakdown. The third session opens with teaching the training matrix which helps the supervisor know who to train for what job and when to train them. The remaining course time is given to participant presentation of actual job instruction. Participants complete the instruction by applying the TWI 4-Step Method. Unlike any other training, the TWI "learn by doing" methodology requires participants to put what they learned in class immediately to use in the workplace

Topics Covered:

- How to effectively prepare to train using the 4-Step Method
- How to train workers so that they can have less scrap, rejects and rework, have fewer accidents and have less tool and equipment damage
- The 4-Step Method of preparing the worker, presenting the operation, try-out performance and follow up
- How to determine who to train for what job by what date

Results:

- Shorter training time
- Standard process for training employees
- Less scrap
- Higher quality
- Less machine downtime and tool damage

Training Within Industry: Job Methods

Program Overview:

The instructor then goes through the TWI "4-Step Method" and shows how the supervisor actually improved the method with the assistance of the operator. The remaining sessions is given to participant presentation of actual tasks to be improved by applying the TWI 4-Step Method. Unlike any other training, the TWI "learn by doing" methodology requires participants to put what they learned in class immediately to use in the workplace.

Topics Covered:

- How to make the best use of materials, machines, and manpower now available.
- How to break a job down into its simplest details
- How to apply the 4 W's and 1 H

The remaining course time is given to participant presentation of actual and current problems participants handle by applying the TWI 4-Step Method. Training Within Industry: Job Safety

Program Overview:

Skill in Accident Prevention - Safety is seen as a critical factor for every supervisor. In that sense, safety is not something every supervisor needs, but rather a vital element of everything they do. In the first session of Job Safety, the trainer presents several examples of real-world problems that everyone can easily relate to. The TWI "4-Step Method," is introduced to show how supervisors can prevent accidents from happening and not to resolve the aftermath. The key line of JS is, "ACCIDENTS ARE CAUSED, BREAK THE CHAIN."

Sessions two through four are practice of the 4-Step Method using more examples and participant demonstrations to "map out" the problems on the board for analysis. In session five, the group goes to the actual worksites of two of the trainees and practices filling out a safety inspection form. This course focuses heavily on putting safety at the center of the supervisor's role. Unlike other training, the TWI "learn by doing" methodology requires participants to put what they learned in class immediately to use in the workplace. Facilitator: Central New York TDO
